

Dominic Crossley, Dispute Resolution partner and privacy and media law specialist at Payne Hicks Beach features in The Spear's Top 500 2017 Directory and is ranked for Reputation Management Lawyers in "Recommended Solicitors" as a "distinguished individual", first published January 2017

REPUTATION MANAGEMENT LAWYERS

THE SPEAR'S 500 // REPUTATION MANAGEMENT LAWYERS

DOMINIC
CROSSLEY
PAYNE HICKS BEACH

DISTINGUISHED INDIVIDUAL

COMPANY SIZE
UK

FOCUS PRIVACY, DEFAMATION, HARASSMENT

Having acted for the 53 core participant victims at the Leveson Inquiry, Dominic Crossley is deeply concerned that the inquiry's suggested reforms have been given misleading interpretations, making the press regulation landscape an 'unnecessary battleground'.

Victims of unlawful publications, he says, are yet to understand how to bring forward the issues to press regulators.

'We're too far away from the solution that Leveson proposed,' he says.

The experienced litigator represented Max Mosley in his dramatic landmark case in privacy law, and was again summoned by the former F1 boss in a claim against Google.

He has also acted for a client who was sued by Morocco's Prince Hicham, as well as Lebanese businessman Issam Hourani.