Known for his representation of Arab royalty and British landed families, Brodrick can as often be found on a day-trip to Bahrain as at a stately home in Cornwall.

Many people underestimate private client work, says the former Spear's award-winner: 'We have to have a very broad understanding, not only of tax and estate planning, but also how companies work in other places, about different legal systems, about... all the things that are risks to family wealth. You sort of end up being the person people phone when they're in the thick of it — both at good and bad points in their life.'

All this makes for a gifted problem-solver. A keen shot and occasional organist, Brodrick joined Payne Hicks Beach in 2012 after eight years at Trowers & Hamblins.
