Payne Hicks Beach makes two partner and two associate promotions

NEWS TEAM, 03/12/2019

London law firm, Payne Hicks Beach, has made four promotions – two partner and two associate – across its dispute resolution, family and risk and compliance departments.

Scott Goldstein and Jonathan Sewell have been made up to partner within the dispute resolution and risk and compliance departments respectively.

Furthermore, Nick Grant and Katie Parkes have been promoted to associate level. These appointments are effective from 1 December 2019.

Mr Goldstein - who specialises in property litigation - has over 17 years' experience in the high net worth residential and commercial property arena, with a particular interest in landlord and tenant work. His practice includes a number of matters from service charge and boundary disputes to leasehold enfranchisement claims. He has built up a diverse client base with a particular following of developer and high net worth clients.

Mr Sewell has also been added to the partnership, having been appointed as director of risk and compliance in May 2017. He is experienced in providing oversight on regulatory duties, in addition to, enforcing operational and risk management procedures.

The firm's dispute resolution department will be further reinforced with the promotion of Nick Grant to associate within the privacy and media Team. Having joined Payne Hicks Beach in 2017, Mr Grant has developed his specialisms in defamation and media law, especially on matters relating to the publication of defamatory allegations across all forms of media.

Additionally, within the firm's family department, Katie Parkes has been made an associate. Ms Parkes' work spans all areas of private family law, including financial remedies, pre and post-nuptial agreements, in addition to, child arrangements. She often advises on cases with complex financial and international aspects.
