Payne Hicks Beach strengthens key teams with Associate promotions

Leading London law firm, Payne Hicks Beach, is pleased to announce two promotions within its Family and Private Client departments. Nick Manners and Caroline Ferrigan have been made Associates within the firm's Family and Private Client departments respectively. Both appointments are effective from 1 June.

Having completed his training contract with Payne Hicks Beach, Nick Manners joined the firm's highly respected Family department in 2010. Nick advises on all areas of family law, from the financial consequences of divorce and pre-nuptial agreements, to cohabitation agreements and matters relating to the custody of children. Nick is instructed on both contentious and non-contentious matters, with one of his most notable cases being Ciccone v Ritchie.

Within the Private Client department, Caroline Ferrigan has been promoted to Associate having joined the firm in 2016. Caroline advises on a breadth of private client matters, including trusts, wills and estate planning, personal tax and planning for non-domiciled individuals. Caroline is a member of STEP and was named one of eprivateclient's 2016 Top 35 Under 35 private client advisers.

Alastair Murdie, Senior Partner, comments on the promotions:

"These promotions reflect the calibre of expertise on offer within our distinguished Private Client and Family departments and our dedication to nurturing the talent within the firm. Nick and Caroline's promotions are very much deserved and recognise their continued commitment to their clients and the firm."
