» of British landed families.

A lot of people still underestimate what private client work is about, he says: 'We have to have a very broad understanding, not only of tax and estate planning, but also how companies work in other places, about different legal systems, about property and family breakdown and all the things that are risks to family wealth.'

'You sort of end up being the person people phone when they're in the thick of it — both at good and bad points in their life. You really don't know what's going to be coming next. You have to be able to advise on all those things. You have to be a good listener, and have a very good little black book.'

Such dedication to comprehension makes him a gifted communicator and problem-solver. The keen shot and occasional organist joined Payne Hicks Beach in 2012 after eight years at Trowers & Hamlins.
