

The dangers of crying 'negative contribution' in divorce proceedings - Rebecca Cockcroft for eprivateclient

10 February 2021

Commentary by Rebecca Cockcroft, Consultant and Co-Head of the leading Family department at Payne Hicks Beach, on a recent case in which the wife attempted to argue that the husband had made a "negative contribution" to the marriage and that this should result in her receiving a greater share of the marital pot. First published online at eprivateclient on 8 February 2021 and reproduced with kind permission.

<https://www.paminsight.com/epc/article/negative-contributions-marriage-kr>

Rebecca is an experienced top family lawyer, specialising in divorce, financial remedy proceedings, arrangements for children,(including international relocation) and financial provision for unmarried parents and cohabittees. She leads a strong team, renowned for delivering the highest level of service, with astute financial acumen and exceptional levels of support.

For further information please contact Rebecca Cockcroft, Consultant and Co-Head of the Family department by email or telephone on 020 7465 4300.

Click below to read Rebecca's commentary in eprivateclient